

Lifting operators

Marinus A. Kaashoek

Abstract

Viewing an operator as part of a larger but more structured operator is an important technique in mathematical analysis, with many applications to interpolation and completion problems. In these three lectures this will be illustrated on various examples. The commutant lifting theorem and its more recent relaxed version will be focus points. Also it will be shown how ideas from mathematical system and control theory can be used to get explicit solutions to concrete lifting problems.